Millions of scientists work for the development of new technologies, drugs and therapies that will be effective in modern conditions of life. The idea of holism takes great development in medicine, which allows examining any process, not to treat symptoms but disease and demonstrates the effectiveness of alternative medicine.

In the XXI century natural resources are increasingly used in treating patients: natural oils, herbs, essential oils and ingredients of natural origin. Slime of snail-ahatyna is among those. These are gigantic mollusks that were previously prevalent only in Africa. Its properties: removing of necrotic skin cells; antiseptic function through content of natural antibiotic that prevents the development of skin diseases; the synthesis of collagen and elastin.

Snail slime has got a particular importance in the cosmetology. Snail secretion prevents wide scarring of stitches after surgery and burns, treats skin sprains during pregnancy, protects against skin aging and treats acne.

It is widely used the procedure of facial massage and other surfaces of skin with the help of snails-ahatyna in Ukraine. Slime of snails is added to ointments, creams, fluids and a range of cosmetic remedies to achieve an aesthetic and a therapeutic effect. This method is more efficient to produce positive results without distal procedures. Adding other components to the purified mucus according to the solved problem will reinforce the expected effect and stimulates cell function.

Thus, alternative medicine has got great advantages in treating patients, and the use of natural resources provides a desired result in pharmacology and cosmetology.
