WHY STUDENTS OF LAW NEED ENGLISH

Motuzna A.V., student of Sumy State University, Group Ju-71

Everyone knows that English is an international language. So, this language is important for every profession, and jurisprudence isn't exception. Speaking about everyday life and everyone I can say that English is needed by studying, job, traveling, communication with foreign friends, taking part in different events, etc.

Being able to speak English allows you to communicate effectively in numerous countries, and this opens up lots of possibilities, not only travelling as a tourist. You'll easily ask the directions and order food in any unknown place. What's more, careers that involve lots of travel or international exposure use English as their official language, and the employers in these sectors require evidence of a certain level of proficiency in English before they will consider employing you. This means that if you can speak English, you'll find that you have a greater number of possible careers to choose from after you finish at university. They also require some experience that we can get with the help of foreign internship programs. When we are law students, we have a good opportunity to take part in different international projects for our future job.

You can enter the Law University of Europe or America to obtain an international diploma and improve your skills.

Accordingly, if you can take part in international events, this gives you more opportunities for personal development and growth of your company. There is special kind of English – legal English. This language originated for legal professionals such as judges, lawyers, legal assistants and attorneys. Learning legal terms is important for your career if you are studying law.

Consequently, there are many reasons for learning English as a law student and for any person. Knowledge of this language takes us to infinite possibilities. You can start to learn English right now and you will see how much you can or you can never use all of your capabilities. English is one of the keys that unlocks a world of possibilities.
