LEADERSHIP IN MEDICINE

Y.Kozachenko,
senior teacher,
Sumy State University

Leadership is one of the important forms of personal development. Today's changes are leading to continuous improvement of educational services. Students are a special population group that can be judged by society as a whole. Youth is a reflection of all the processes that take place in the country, how society cares for development and what it does, and the corresponding result can be obtained. Youth development is influenced by: family, upbringing, school (or other educational institutions), environment, environment, economic and social status of society. Negative changes in society also leave their mark on student youth. However, much depends on the individual. For example, people's perception of problems is completely different. For some, solving them can lead to frustration and frustration, while others make them stronger and more motivated.

In today's context, we believe that the issue of leadership plays an important role in the formation of personality. It should be noted that humanity is evolving and new challenges are emerging to address the needs of society for young people who are ready to improve, to work on new technologies and inventions. Of course, there is a special emphasis in every developed country on the training of a health professional.

We believe that a leader is a person who has the ability to organize a team, it means not only to distribute tasks, to act authoritatively and to demand perfection from employees. Of course, this is not about a leader, especially when referring to the medical process. It is important for medical professionals to take into account the specific nature of the work. Doctors are constantly working for the benefit of society, trying to improve their skills and knowledge using new techniques and technologies. However, the team should always have a personality that you can turn to for help, to hear an objective assessment, to advise on treatment methods. This should be an experienced personality, respected by the team.
