WAYS TO PROTECT YOUR IDEAS

T.V. Pochatko, Sumy State University

Nowadays the protection of intellectual property is very important in our society. Several forms of legal protection are available for your creations. Which you should use depends on what you have created.

Copyrights protect the creators of literary, dramatic, musical, artistic, and other intellectual works. Any printed, filmed, or recorded material can be copyrighted. The copyright gives its owner the exclusive right to reproduce ("copy"), sell, or adapt the work he or she has created. Copyright law covers reproduction by photocopying, videotape, and magnetic storage.

In the USA the Copyright Office, Library of Congress, will issue a copyright to the creator or to someone the creator has granted the right to reproduce the work. (A book, for example, may be copyrighted by the author or the publisher.) Copyrights issued after 1977 are valid for the lifetime of the creator plus 50 years. Copyrights issued prior to 1977 are good for 75 years.

Technically, copyright protection exists from the moment you create the material. When you distribute a work, place a notice on copies that includes the term "copyright" or an abbreviation, the name of the author and the year of publication — for example, "Copyright 1986 Jane Doe". Works can be registered with the Copyright Office for $10.

A trademark is any word, name, symbol, or device used to distinguish the product of one manufacturer from those made by others. A service mark is the same thing for services. McDonald's golden arches are one of the most visible of modern trademarks. Brand names can also be registered as trademarks. Examples are Polaroid, and Chevrolet.

If property registered and renewed every 20 years, a trademark generally belongs to its owner forever. Among the exceptions are popular brand names that have become generic terms, meaning that they describe a whole class of products. A brand-name trademark can become a generic term if the trademark has been allowed to expire.

It is a good idea to have a patent attorney do a "clearance search" before you begin using a mark to be sure it isn't already in use. There's filing fee of $175 for registration with the Patent and Trademark Office. Registration protects your mark for 20 years, and you may renew every 20 years.

A patent protects the invention or discovery of a new and useful process, an article of manufacture, a machine, a chemical substance, or an improvement on any of these. Issued by the U.S. Patent Office, a patent grants the owner the right to exclude others from making, using, or selling the invention for 17 years. After that time, the patent becomes available for common use. On the other hand, patent law guarantees the originator the right to use the discovery exclusively for a relatively long period of time, thus encouraging people to devise new machines, gadgets, and processes. On the other hand, it also ensures that rights to the new item will be released eventually. Other enterprises may be able to make use of it more creatively than its originator.
